Republican Paul Ryan reveals he wants to defund Planned Parenthood entirely

Bad news has emerged for U.S women's reproductive rights...

Pretty shocking news emerged across the pond yesterday in terms of women's reproductive rights.

Republican House Speaker Paul Ryan (who was the Vice Presidential candidate in the 2012 to Mitt Romney) announced the party's plans to defund Planned Parenthood in coming years, meaning they would receive no federal funding. This is part of the Republicans' plan to dismantle Obamacare.

The news hardly comes as a shock, seeing as the majority of Republicans declare themselves as pro-life rather than pro-choice, but is still a blow to hear for American women and indeed, women everywhere.

For many, this declaration is particularly frustrating due to the fact Planned Parenthood is not just associated with abortion, but in fact is a hub for news and resources on sexual and reproductive health including contraception.

Others are angered that this comes from a 46-year-old man who may not be the best person to decide on what is best for a woman and her uterus.

Ryan's statement certainly seems to pave the way for some pretty extreme anti-abortion action while Trump is in office.
